Dear [Company] hiring team,

I build production AI systems end to end, and the one I’m proudest of is basically what you’re hiring for. It’s called Dottie, an AI that answers a real phone line in a natural voice, books meetings, and texts people back. It remembers the whole conversation the next time they call, and it’s live right now on its own number, running around the clock.

I designed and shipped the whole thing myself: the voice layer, the backend and memory on Convex, the webhooks, and the guardrails that keep it from spamming or looping. I move fast, I document as I build, and I test my own work before anyone else sees it.

For [Company]’s [Role], I’d bring that same system to your phone line, with calls that sound human and a memory that actually sticks between them. If you want proof, you can call Dottie and hear it for yourself.

I’d love to walk you through it.

Best,

Drey (Andre Thomas)
